

Markets React Fast — So Do Regulators

Make Sure Your Mobile Communications Are Fortified

A major cyberattack on Smarsh/TeleMessage revealed what happens when financial communications aren't truly secure. Unencrypted archives. Exposed client conversations. Regulatory red flags.

This wasn't just a tech flaw. It was a breakdown in compliance, investor confidence, and operational control.

In finance, one misstep is all it takes to lose everything — licenses, trust, and competitive edge.

The Blunt Reality

The breach happened.

It was avoidable.

It was costly.

And it shook trust — in systems, providers, and promises.
